Origins

The School of the Glawackus emerged as a splinter radical faction of the School of the Bear. At some point during the 11th century, but little else is known. Except where they settled.

History

Founding (11th century)

The School was founded from a radical splinter faction that came from the School of the Bear.

Extinction (the 1260s)

The school was supposedly destroyed during the Nazair's rebellion but some sources claim that its destruction happened before.

There are rumors that some witchers from this school were involved in the rebellion because of certain deals they made with the local nobles.

Characteristics

As a radical faction of the bears, their main characteristic is to focus on extreme defense. To some extent, its armor and techniques were reminiscent of the original Order of Witchers, but much more restrained and less agile.

Their mutations also made them much more resilient than an ordinary witcher, even a School of the Rhino witcher.
